$9 Million Bond Issue Is Rejected

The Marion County Health and Hospital Corporation was forced to reject bids for the purchase of a $9 million bond issue yesterday when state tax officials refused to give permission for the bond sale.

Arthur P. Owens, executive director of the hospital corporation, said today a delay in granting approval by the State Board of Tax Commissioners resulted in the bid rejections.

The bond issue would have paid for a new building and equipment at General Hospital. The proposed facility would house an emergency room.

Five bids were received Thursday. Owens said, the low bid of 5.75 percent being submitted by the Harris Bank Corp. Inc. of Chicago in collaboration with Indiana National Bank.

Owens said the hospital corporation was originally scheduled to meet with the tax commission in June but the meeting was postponed to July 18, one week prior to the day scheduled for opening bids.

The corporation met with the commission on the 18th and anticipated a decision that day, Owens explained. The tax board failed to decide on the bond issue, he said, and attempts to contact board members prior to the opening of bids were futile.

Owens said the corporation also was waiting on a decision by the Marion County Comprehensive Health Planning Council before accepting bids.

The hospital corporation had set a Bid of 6 percent on the bids when the bond issue was drawn up in May, Owens said.

All of the bids were under 6 percent, he said, but the corporation had told the planning council the bonds would not be sold without their approval.

Owens said the bond issue will be resubmitted to the planning council and if they approve, the corporation will advertise for new bids.

Dedication Of Mosaic Tomorrow

A mosaic panel of Christ the King, designed by Sister Cecelia Ann Kelly, associate professor of art at St. Mary's College, will be dedicated in sonrow at Christ the King Catholic Church, 1627 E. Kenwood.

The completed work, which is 8 by 7 feet and depicts the figure of Christ somewhat smaller than life-size, is composed of Italian handmade glass.

The figure of Christ is the central feature, clothed in white, with outstretched arms. The hands and feet bear the marks of the sacred wounds. He stands triumphant on the cross. The Christ-figure is crowned with fire and light, and from His side comes a combination of light and water, symbolizing the participation of all creation in the act of redemption.

Sister Cecelia Ann, who joined the college faculty in 1974, holds a master of fine arts degree from the University of Utah. She has exhibited her drawings and paintings throughout the Mid-west.

The body of Donald G. Rhodes of near Warrensburg, Mo., was found Wednesday along a rural road in West Central Missouri. Missouri authorities said Rhodes was stabbed in the chest.

Authorities said Miles told them he was hitchhiking along Interstate 70 when a man in a pickup truck offered him a ride. Miles said the man took him to a rural area off the interstate and attempted to force Miles into an act of sodomy.

Miles said he stabbed the man, dumped the body from the truck and drove off. Miles said he drove the truck until it ran out of gas, then hitchhiked back to Fort Wayne.

Miles said he sought advice from a minister, who counseled him to surrender to authorities.

Education Cash Need Top Issue

FRENCH LICK, Ind. (AP)— Indiana can increase its 648 all support of public education within the structure of the 1973 property tax relief program, Gov. Otis R. Bowen said today.

School finance problems, heightened by inflation and property tax freezes imposed by the tax program, are expected to get top priority attention by the 1974 General Assembly.

At a recent legislative study committee meeting, a spokesman for Indiana school superintendents said the state would have to increase its funding of education by more than $90 million next year to keep pace with inflation. Some legislators said that could be a major setback to the tax program's solvency.

In remarks at the Indiana State Teachers Association meeting here, Bowen said his administration still is examining the problem. Double-digit inflation will require "wise educational stewardship" by the state, he said.

"The twin goals of property tax relief and increasing the state's percentage of overall educational support are both compatible and well worthy of pursuit. We have taken a major step to move education finance from the narrow and inviolably discriminatory base of the property tax.

"In taking that step, Indiana also assumed the responsibility of additional state aid.

"The governor noted that before the tax program was enacted by the 1973 legislature, a growing number of Hoosier school corporations were "achieving the dubious status of distressed school," in need of additional state aid.

JUST A MOUSE WITH A PROBLEM

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Rep. William L. Hungate, D-Mo., wasn't impressed during the House Judiciary Committee impeachment debate yesterday when Republicans complained that President Nixon was being accused on the basis of "inferences."

He drew a laugh when he said: "If some guy brought an elephant through that door, some of the doubters would say, 'That's an inference—it might be a mouse with a glandular condition.' Well, maybe one mouse, but not 12."
